Kennesaw State University promotes open and honest intellectual inquiry, and inspires professional, personal, and social excellence throughout the KSU community.
Our strengths

KSU has increasing visibility and a solid reputation due to its highly qualified faculty, nationally ranked and accredited programs, commitment to student learning and success, first-year student programs, international opportunities for students and faculty, expanding research and graduate programs, focus on community engagement, and professional staff dedicated to serving students.

KSU’s reputation is enhanced by its emphasis on students’ access to full-time faculty, high quality programs, investment in technological infrastructure, increasing diversity, presence in Division I athletics, emphasis on professional service, and extensive new campus construction.

KSU’s degree programs and organizational culture are strengths. Many of KSU’s degree programs are innovative and market-driven, and many focus on leadership development and collaboration across college boundaries. Accompanying its growth, KSU retains its student-oriented focus, serves a diverse student body that includes multicultural and multifaceted traditional and non-traditional students, and is committed to inclusiveness, diversity, and freedom of thought and expression.

A number of factors contribute to KSU’s graduation rate improvement, including establishment of on-campus housing; expanded emphasis on student advising; and changes in the campus culture to create stronger connections among students, staff, faculty, administrators and the institution. The university has a dynamic and flexible professional and continuing education program. Campus life is vibrant, with many student organizations and off-campus activities readily available. In addition, KSU is highly and positively rated for its work environment.

Our weakness

KSU has evolved rapidly as an institution. Therefore, KSU must significantly enhance its name and brand recognition by, among other things, raising public awareness of its numerous strengths, and correcting dated and inaccurate perceptions of the university.

The low level of state funding on a per student basis compared to other USG universities is a weakness. The university has fewer classrooms, laboratories, research facilities, offices, and meeting spaces than many peer institutions. In addition, recent budgetary shortfalls have slowed repairs, reduced required services such as evening advising and counseling, limited strategic marketing, and curtailed other academic and academic-support programs required to advance KSU to the next level. Also, even with more on-campus housing, Division I athletics, and state-of-the-art sports and recreation facilities, opportunities for on-campus student activities on weekends are limited.

Despite fund-raising successes, KSU has insufficient funding for scholarships, reducing KSU’s ability to recruit the best students. At the same time, not all of KSU’s entering undergraduates are prepared to succeed in higher education. Off-campus and on-campus bureaucratic constraints sometimes hamper KSU’s ability to function efficiently and to respond agilely to emerging opportunities.

Easily accessible from Atlanta and northwest Georgia, KSU’s location provides visibility and connectedness due to easy accessibility to metropolitan Atlanta, Georgia, and the world. The campus setting is attractive and safe.
KSU can address many of its weaknesses and capitalize on its strengths by developing opportunities to increase its resources through private, corporate, and foundation development; expanding its emphasis on research and sponsored programs; developing innovative profit centers; and enhancing community, alumni, faculty, and staff giving. In addition, KSU must expand its support within the government of Georgia and the Board of Regents, especially to attain per student funding levels on par with peer USG institutions.

Our opportunities

KSU’s location provides access to a large, diverse population of students, and provides members of the KSU community unique partnership and career opportunities with other universities, businesses, industries, health-care facilities, and nonprofit organizations in metropolitan Atlanta, Georgia, and the world. These partnerships, as well as KSU’s rapidly increasing numbers of alumni, present a chance to encourage a greater appreciation for higher education among Georgians. KSU has opportunities for creative land acquisitions and off-site facility development to accommodate enrollment growth. Opportunities exist to expand study abroad programs, international partnerships, intra-college and cross-college interdisciplinary programs, inter-institutional partnerships, online courses and programs, and co-curricular activities to meet the needs and schedules of a diverse student body.

Opportunities exist in specific program areas throughout the university’s nine colleges. Additional graduate programs are necessary to meet the needs of individuals, employers, the state, the nation, and the world. At both the undergraduate and graduate levels, opportunities exist to expand internship, cooperative, and study abroad programs. Together, these opportunities present KSU with the ability to enhance significantly its regional and national name and brand recognition, and in so doing to become a nationally known and nationally respected university.
Our threats

The impacts of recent changes to the HOPE scholarship; alteration in the missions of Technical College and two-year University System institutions; and increases in the number of branch campuses and on-line programs of other institutions are yet to be seen. Under certain scenarios, these changes could emerge as threats.

KSU has lower faculty and staff salaries, and higher student-faculty and student-staff ratios, than many peer institutions. Given the high-quality job markets in which KSU competes, these weaknesses lower morale, render more difficult the recruitment, hiring and retention of faculty and staff, and complicate efforts to diversify faculty and staff.

Local traffic patterns, flows, and congestion make access to and egress from campus difficult during peak travel times. Although a shuttle system has been initiated, insufficient parking remains a threat. These make KSU less accessible for many students.

If the university is to attain its full potential, it must acquire more land to support university enrollment growth, projected to reach 35,000 students.

Conclusions

Kennesaw State University is an institution that has significant strengths and extensive opportunities. If it leverages its strengths and takes advantage of its opportunities to the fullest extent possible, KSU will overcome its weaknesses, surmount its challenges, and succeed in fulfilling its vision of becoming a nationally prominent university recognized for excellence in education, engagement, and innovation.

KSU has the opportunity to leverage demand in professions for which our degree programs prepare students. KSU must plan for additional growth; improve student-faculty and student-staff ratios; foster an environment that embraces inclusiveness and diversity; improve customer service; enhance relationships and engagement with alumni and surrounding communities; and expand its emphasis on recruiting the best and brightest students, staff, and faculty.
